DESCRIPTION OF LEVELS

Examples of work and descriptions are meant to progress through the levels. For example, an employee at level V may also perform work listed within the previous levels.

Note: Factors that may distinguish between entry and journey levels include the level of independence in performing the work and the complexity of the work and may include the employee's years of related experience, education, and certifications. Employees at the journey levels may independently perform the full range of work listed in the examples or may assist others in that work.

PLANNER I: Performs entry-level planning and research work. Works under close supervision, with minimal latitude for the use of initiative and independent judgment. Employees at this level may have limited experience or no experience and spend the majority of their time performing simple to routine work following standard procedures. Employees may also occasionally assist other staff in performing work of greater complexity

PLANNER II: Performs routine (journey-level) planning and research work. Works under moderate supervision, with limited latitude for the use of initiative and independent judgment. Employees at this level may rely on direction from others to solve problems that are not standard, may routinely assist other staff in performing work of greater complexity, and may:

- Review plans, proposals, and studies.
- Provide technical planning assistance to the public, developers, and contractors; and to local, regional, or state entities.
- Develop short-range and long-range local and statewide plans, projects, or programs.

Note: Any senior-level employee (levels III-V) may serve in a lead or supervisory role; however, typically, supervisory responsibilities within this job classification series will be found at levels IV and V, depending on the structure and size of the program and/or workgroup.

Senior-level employees may perform the full range of work identified in the levels preceding their own and/or may oversee or coordinate that work for others. Factors that may distinguish between senior levels include the scope of responsibility and oversight, the complexity of the work performed, the scope and nature of the project, and the employee's related experience, education, and certifications.

PLANNER III: Performs highly complex (senior-level) planning and research work. Works under limited supervision, with considerable latitude for the use of initiative and independent judgment. Employees at this level may:

- Develop policies and procedures for the implementation, administration, and evaluation of plans or programs; and measures progress.
- Develop methodologies and specifications for planning and research projects.
- Provide technical assistance for planning contracts and reports on planning projects.
- Prepare and monitors performance measures.
- Prepare reports and present findings to stakeholders.
- Review and evaluate planning material for contractual compliance.

- Analyze needs and construct and implement decision support-based applications.
- Identify, define, and research issues of strategic importance.
- Forecast and monitor program performance objectives.

PLANNER IV: Performs advanced (senior-level) planning and research work. Works under limited supervision, with considerable latitude for the use of initiative and independent judgment. Employees at this level may:

- Consult on the planning, design, and implementation phases of planning projects.
- Serve as a liaison among federal, state, and local agencies and regional groups in matters concerning the coordination of plans and services.

PLANNER V: Performs highly advanced (senior-level) planning and research work. Works under minimal supervision, with extensive latitude for the use of initiative and independent judgment. Employees at this level may be considered technical experts in the field and may work on multiple complex planning and research projects simultaneously. They may often provide strategic direction and oversight on highly complex planning projects and may:

- Oversee and/or prepare complex reports, presentations, and technical documents.
- Administer the development of complex plans or programs, assesses the feasibility of planning proposals, and initiates program strategy development.
- Lead and participate in technical, policy, and interagency planning meetings.
- Prepare materials in response to requests for information and reports.
